

Cooking for Copyright Day

31 July 2015

Why Cooking for Copyright?

Through FAIR (the campaign for Freedom of Access to Information and Resources), ALIA and the Australian Libraries Copyright Committee ran Cooking for Copyright Day on Friday 31 July. We used vintage Aussie recipes for lamingtons, canteen biscuits and carrot marmalade to help drive the copyright reform agenda.

Copyright law in Australia is a muddle. The Australian Libraries Copyright Committee (ALCC), of which ALIA is a founder member, has lobbied long and hard for change but the challenge has proved either too great, or too low down the priority list for successive governments. The task of untangling the copyright regime currently lies with the Attorney-General, who is due to respond to the findings of the Australian Law Reform Commission's February 2014 report into Copyright and the Digital Economy in September.

Within the copyright maze, there are several non-controversial issues that could be easily fixed. Perpetual copyright in unpublished works falls into this category. We launched Cooking for Copyright to raise awareness of the issue, provide an opportunity for active engagement from libraries and the cultural sector, and generate media coverage.

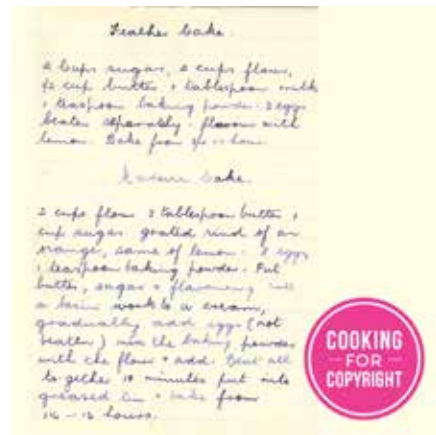

Our story went like this:

The National Library of Australia has approximately two million unpublished works in its collection, including handwritten letters from Jane Austen, Prince Albert, Captain Cook, Charles Darwin, Sir Charles Kingsford Smith, Dame Nellie Melba, Henry Lawson, Elizabeth Macquarie, Christobel Pankhurst and Banjo Paterson.

Yet none of these can lawfully be digitised and shared with Australians on the web because of our archaic copyright system. Unlike Canada, the US, UK and all of the EU countries, which have copyright terms for unpublished works that are in line with those for published works (70 years after the death of the creator), in Australia copyright for unpublished works lasts forever.

And it's not just the National Library, this affects every library, museum, archive and historical society with items from before the 1950s. For example, the Australian War Memorial has diaries, letters, sketches from soldiers who died in World War I. Often publication on the web is the only way to connect descendants with these family records. The State Library of South Australia collection includes the records of Holden motor company, including company records, correspondence and engineering design drawings, from 1853. These national treasures are trapped by Australia's outdated copyright laws.

We would like the same copyright terms for unpublished works as for published works. Then our libraries, museums and historical societies could put these treasures on the web for family historians, researchers, and everyone else who is fascinated by our social history.

We posted 35 handwritten recipes to the FAIR website – effectively contravening the current copyright law – and we asked Australians to cook one of these recipes – or choose an old favourite – and post a photo to facebook (facebook.com/cookingforcopyright) or tweet with the #cookingforcopyright hashtag.

Within two weeks of launch we had a strong presence on social media, more than 500 people actively sharing recipes and ideas, and the promise of events in libraries up and down the country. This fun approach to a serious subject not only galvanised the sector, it also attracted the attention of the media – radio, print and online – helping to spread the word, not only about perpetual copyright in unpublished works, but also about the need for fundamental copyright reform.

#cookingforcopyright. I'm contributing my sourdough loaves just out of the oven for this online librarian led movement for copyright reform in Australia.

#sourdough #baking #breadmaking -----

----- This is in memory of my grandmother, on my mothers side, who lived a self-sufficient peasant lifestyle in the mountains of Macedonia. Monday was bread baking day and she would bake the sourdough loaves for the whole week for a family that had seven children. When I visited as a ten year old, her family had grown to now incorporate partners of her children and grandchildren. Many still living with her and I experienced bread making day as a communal experience with all the women baking, laughing and telling stories ❤️ -----

-- Recipe for each loaf is 1 cup rye sourdough starter 2 teaspoons of seasalt 3 cups of wholemeal biodynamic flour 1 cup of boiled then cooled water Mix ingredients together then stretch and fold, stretch and fold, stretch and fold the dough for about ten minutes. Cover with cling wrap and leave to rest for half an hour. Repeat stretch and fold process then form into a loaf. Place loaf on a floured baking tray and leave to proof for at least 6 hours whilst covered with cling wrap. Before baking, scorer the top of the loaf and dust with flour. Place in an preheated oven at 220degrees. Bake for approximately 40 minutes then increase heat and bake for a further 10 minutes In the final 5 minutes of baking, spray water mist over the loaf to create a beautiful crust.

Drumroll..... Please... Joseph's Muddy Pat $11.50 @patissez warm choc shake, chewy fudge brownie, more chocolate fudge, whipped cream and toasted house made marshie #VisitCanberra #canberra #cookingforcopyright #eatingforcopyright tablespoons of ground dried paprika 2 to 3 tablespoons of vegetable stock powder or stock cubes if you prefer. Place capsicum, onions beans and water in a pot and bring to the boil on the stove. Turn down and let simmer with lid on for approximately 2 hours. Add the remaining ingredients and leave to simmer for a further two hours. You can add more water, during the final simmering stage, if it has dropped too low. Voila, perfection in a bowl and perfect with an added splash of tobasco if you desire more zing. #vegan #slowfood #slowlife #macedonianfood #goodlife #australia #copyrightreform

It's #CookingForCopyright day! We're showing our support for copyright reform by sharing unpublished recipes throughout the day. If you have any old family favourites, please join us in sharing them!

Leek + Potato Soup
Melt 30g butter add 2 leeks finely sliced + cook until soft
Season with salt and pepper.
Add 2 medium potatoes - peeled and diced and 3 cups chicken stock
Simmer for 30 mins
Blend until smooth.

"Join #cookingforcopyright FAIR is campaigning for copyright law reform – it's long overdue – and right now we're focused on one thing in particular, the fact that in Australia, while copyright is limited to 70 years after the death of the creator for published works, for unpublished works copyright lasts forever. Unpublished works include old diaries, letters, company records, theses – even recipes. The copyright rules as they currently stand mean that these manuscripts, valuable pieces of social history, are locked away – to no one's benefit. We'd (ALIA) like the same copyright terms for unpublished works as for published works. More information here: <https://fair.alia.org.au/cookingforcopyright>"

Cooking for Copyright Day 31 July 2015

Copyright lasts 70 years after the death of the creator for published works, but for unpublished works copyright lasts forever. So old diaries, letters, photographs, and even recipes are locked away. If we had the ...

Why the campaign? #cookingforcopyright

Australian copyright law is a muddle. It's confusing to read, hard to interpret, and it hasn't kept up with new technologies. Some of the changes we'd like to see are controversial, but putting the same copyright ...
